

You Are Unique!

The movie "Uniquely You" is playing on the big screen of your life, and you have been offered the 'leading role'.

Are you comfortable with that?
No one on this earth can handle this role better than you.

Who is the best person for the job. Stop settling for the 'role' of best supporting actress. What movie you are starring in, is it a drama, a tragedy, or maybe even a comedy?

Forget "It's not easy being Green"
No disrespect Kermit. It is much harder trying to be true to you. Maybe for some ladies this isn't a hard task. But for those of us that struggle with this... No... I'm going to change that statement. For those that 'have' struggled in the past with being true to self; today is a new day. Another day to work towards being uniquely you. Are we all just role playing? I'm not trying to trivialize our lives. I'm using this to make a point.

"To be yourself in a world that is constantly trying to make you something else is the greatest accomplishment."

Ralph Waldo Emerson

What Does It Mean To Be Uniquely You?

It means not having to (not even wanting to) wear a mask to hide behind.

Being brave enough to come out from behind the curtain, willing to step out onto the stage of life. Becoming the beautiful treasure you were created to be. As I said no one does it better.

Did you ever know?

Have you gone through life confused? Wanting desperately to be accepted. You gravitated towards anything that seemed to be popular and excepted? Unless you've experienced this scenario it may seem far fetched.

However, when you live it... it's a different story. One that some try to keep buried in their thoughts. It's time for change. What about making a stand. Refuse to be held down by past disappointments, and or failures. Do not allow your past to rob you of a bright future.

There are other area's on this site that are designed to encourage you to look at yourself in the mirror, and not just to check your makeup.

I strive to be a woman of character. One of the side effects of living through my childhood is when I see a need I desire to fix it. As a child I longed for someone to look closer, to listen harder to words I was afraid to say...

This side effect of mine is not always received positively. However I am determined to continue to share my 'life lessons' with those that will listen. I will encourage others to do the same. We can make a positive difference in this world!

Have you forgotten?

How to be 'You' that is... remember that nice little girl that could have been on a poster with the caption reading:

"Sugar And Spice, And Everything Nice!" Ring games, tea parties with your dolls, and playing house.

Or maybe you were like my youngest daughter... she certainly looked the part of sugar and spice but her caption would have read something more like "Cute And Cuddly Chub Chub."

If you've seen the movie "Men In Black" the Chub Chubs were featured in a mini cartoon before the movie. Cute but dangerous. 😊

Maybe you don't see yourself in either of these scenarios, that's okay we were all created to be special.

So take a little time, sit and reminisce of days gone by (or at least when who you wanted to be began to slip from the forefront of your thoughts).

It's Time To Dream Again!

Are you confident?

If yes, I applaud you! Although not 100% perfect, you know where you stand. You have embraced the wonderful woman that you are.

You understand that there is room for improvement, you're always looking for ways to make positive changes. Always making sure you remain uniquely you.

Are You Reproducible?

No... I'm not suggesting placing you into a cloning machine. Because once you were cloned you would no longer be the unique person you were created by God to be.

Your name isn't 'Dolly' is it? For the younger generation, 'Dolly' was the name of the 1st cloned sheep 😊.

The question being asked is whether or not you are a woman that others admire and , or look up to. Are you a woman that would be a good role model , someone others could pattern themselves after?

A woman of character.

A positive role model.

If yes, send me a note on our contact page.

Let's all strive to be worth reproducing.